

By MARILYN BATES
They told me it would be a fun thing to take Cub Scout Pack 217 to a Saturday matinee featuring Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, and I believed them. I packed six little boys neatly into my compact car and we set off.

"Move over, will ya, Steve. You're sitting on my Jujubes."

"I can't," was the response. "Billy's water gun is sticking in my side."

"Why was it necessary to bring your water gun, Billy?" I inquired without hope.

"Cause I'm gonna shoot the ole witch when she comes to get Snow White, and maybe I'll even shoot Grumpy too."

He drew his gun and made appropriate gestures for the action he planned to take, jostling his neighbors in the process. Scuffling, bumping sounds followed as assorted knees and elbows found their target, and a general realignment took place in the back seat. Suddenly a paper airplane launched by unseen forces sailed before me, blocking my view of traffic.

"Gee, your mom sure doesn't know how to drive any good," one of them commented. "Lookit, she almost ran into that truck in front of us."

"SHE DOES too know how to drive good," my son defended me. She drives better than your mom. Remember the time she took us to the hockey game and she backed into that big pile of snow and got stuck?"

"That's only cause Roger was trying to stand on his head in the back seat, and she couldn't see where she was going. Gimme back my Jujubes. They fell out of my pocket. Doggone you, Billie, you ate some."

Somehow we reached the theater and while I was buying the tickets, they all vanished before my eyes. Eventually one of them reappeared.

"Where are the rest of you?" I demanded. "The show is ready to start."

"Well, Roger's at the candy counter buying caramel corn and Milk Duds and Frosty Ice. I'm going to sit next to him, and Mike and Jimmy are in the bathroom, and Billy is filling his water gun again at the fountain, and Steve is out on the fire escape dropping wet toilet paper balls on people down in the street."

"You stay right here," I instructed. "I'll get them. I captured Roger at the bubble gum machine, cornered Steve on the fire escape, confiscated Billy and his water gun at the fountain, but met defeat at the door of the men's room. Eventually a kind gentleman took pity on me and followed my request to inform the two little boys malingering inside to come out immediately."

Together at last, we took our seats and proceeded to enjoy the movie. I use the word enjoy loosely because I saw very little of the film owing to the constant mass exodus to the candy counter and the fountain and the bathroom. I couldn't hear very much either because of the sustained chorus of cheers or hoots or hisses. I didn't really care though, because I already knew how it ended, and anyhow I was thinking about the trip home.

Barn sale to help retarded

Community Living Centers, Inc. (CLC) will hold its first barn sale Friday and Saturday in the barn on Wagner House grounds, 30301 W. Thirteen Mile, in Farmington. Sale hours are from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. each day.

The sale will feature a wide variety of new and used merchandise including clothing, furniture, toys, household appliances, china, glassware, linens, antiques, sports equipment and yard equipment.

CLC is a non-profit organization dedicated to helping the retarded by providing, supervising and maintaining a family home environment. It was founded in 1968 by a group of concerned parents, community leaders and professional people.

sale of used, new and rare oriental rugs

Come to Hudson's Northland Annex and choose from our $900,000 collection of rug treasures

At Hudson's Northland only, in our Annex right next to Parking Lot B—you find magnificent hand-woven oriental rugs. Kermans, Bukaras, Tabriz, Chinese, and many, many others. Ranging from tiny scatters to extra large sizes. From nominally priced to collectors' items. Art treasures that you'll enjoy owning for years and years—and that all the while are increasing in value as they become more and more rare.

Mr. Robert Sarian, foremost authority on oriental rugs, will be here to help you make your selections, answer questions and present a slide lecture on the oriental rug weaving art. The lecture will be today, Thursday, at 1 p.m.

Just a sampling of the values marked at far below their original prices. All listed are subject to prior sale.
