

Two coffee tables were made by Vogel

Their decor is art

The Anthony Vogel's way of life is built around art. Both husband and wife are artists and their home abounds with examples of their various forms of expression.

Mrs. Vogel is a woodcut specialist and also does macrame and painting. Her husband is a professional framer. (He is co-owner of the Klein-Vogel Gallery.)

However, his skill with wood extends much farther to other forms. Besides exquisite rims around pictures, he makes hand-inlaid tables.

The couple's game table top has 11 different woods inlaid in a pattern taken from an Ernest Trova print. Another table top has the gallery's stone bird logo inlaid.

The coffee tables are inlaid with two-dimensional optical illusion banding in satinwood and yew. The patterns on all the tables are made of unusual wood combinations, all matched and mitred like the finest cabinetry available commercially.

He also made the stained-glass. (Continued on page 18)
