

Goodies for Chanukah

By SHERRY KAHAN

Chanukah is the time of year to light the candles on the menorah, have parties and dance the hora. It is time for those of the Jewish faith to have good things to eat like potato latkes, a traditional Chanukah dish.

With food an important part of the background of this festive occasion, it is fortunate that just at this time the Pioneer Women of the Greater Detroit Council, with headquarters in Farmington, have produced a book called the "Golden Jubilee Cook Book."

"We brought out the book in honor of our organization's 50th year in the U.S.," said Gloria Zabner of Southfield, editor of the new publication. "We decided to do something to celebrate. Cooking is something all women enjoy."

will be used to support Pioneer projects in Israel.

"WE PROVIDE a great many social services for women and youth of Israel," explained Ruth Miller of Birmingham. "We help support day care nurseries, agricultural schools, vocational and trade classes, counseling services to war widows, consumer guidance programs and immigration centers."

For information about the $5.50 cook book, contact the Greater Detroit Council of Pioneer Women, 2655 Middle Belt, Farmington.

Peacock — no primadonna

The male peacock may not be as much of a primadonna as one might think.

When his colorful tail feathers are spread in full glory, the peacock does not merely strut around in a circle to seduce the peahen.

Actually, he's doing it to keep from falling on his face. By turning, the peacock is able to maintain his balance while displaying an abundance of colorful feathers.
