Revenue sharing 'effective'

A recent audit finds that Oakland County's use of federal revenue sharing funds complies with U.S. Treasury Department regulations. More than half the $8.4 million the county received was used for construction of new facilities at Children's Village. The remainder was spent on projects such as patient care in state institutions, court-appointed attorneys, medical examiners' office, juvenile court and drainage. County Executive Daniel T. Murphy, who is active in the movement to have Congress move revenue sharing said: "The audit demonstrates, in a small way, the effectiveness and efficiency of revenue sharing as it is being administered at the local level."

"It serves to remind us that citizens can and should make their own decisions on how some of the money they send to the federal government should be spent," Murphy said. Under revenue sharing, in effect since 1972, a percentage of the tax money collected by the government is returned to communities to be spent on local needs without federal intervention.

Griffiths give nature library

Natural history buffs now have access to more than 200 books on the subject at the Nature Center at Kenington Metropark near Milford. The Russell C. Griffith Library was a gift presented to the Nature Center by Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Griffith of Livonia, as a memorial to their son, Russell, who died at 19 in an automobile accident in 1971. Mrs. Patricia Ernst Carlson, supervising naturalist, says that books may be used at the center from 1:30 p.m. on weekdays, and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.
