

Suitable for spring

For many women, the first breath of spring means it's time to find a flattering suit. Top designer collections have many of them for spring, 1976. Here are a few of the most wearable.

Bill Blass has two spring smoothies for the woman who loves classics. Left, a camel and beige latticel cardigan with navy trim over a short-sleeved matching sweater blouse and a camel knife-pleated skirt. The suit at the right is fashioned in an Italian pombre stripe silk fabric and features a camel hand-knit vest and matching stripe scarf.

Bill Kaiserman uses his exclusive cotton crepe for a Rafael suit that goes shopping in the city or relaxing by a beach. The ankle-length skirt and shirt are topped by a matching vest.

Casual elegance is this suit inspired by suede designed by Judith Leiser at Schneider Sport. Its western cut jacket with a snap front and its narrow skirted skirt are adaptable to almost any occasion from dinner to lunch in town.

Adele Simpson is in an Oriental mood for spring. Her two-piece black matte jersey pajamas feature a sensuous halter top and a coordinated quilted polyester twill jacket in a black and white floral print.
