3 top Rochester athletes transfers to Groves

By GLENN BUNTING
You can take sports away from the high school stillete, but you can't take the stillete away from sports. That's the ture for Rochester Adams serios Brian King words are singles about the stillete away from sports are singles about with senior Jeff Washburn, are allocked with senior Jeff Washburn, are allocked to little the stillete stillet. All three are prominent track stars who were affected by the recent millage defeat that eliminated spring sports in Rochester, lasted of sittle go the seldentes little there classmates, the threesome established residency in the Birmagham School District and are slated to compete this weet.

REARNEY LOOKS at the acquisitions from two arparate angles. The subletic ability is obviously there for all three transfers and they're definitely going to be an asset to our team," said the Palcon mentor.

"But I'm equally concerned with their personalities. It's tough to have to switch schools and compete on a foreign team under a new coach. It takes a bit of character for these guys to get a proper handle on the situation." All three of them have portrayed super.

King is Groves' prize catch as he starred in the quarter- and half-mile runs last spring. Among his accomplishments were firsts in the Oakland County and Oxford in-
