You may not need that old lamp any longer, but there is someone who thinks that it will be just perfect next to their plaid sofa. Or what about that huge trunk, or that lawn mower you no longer use. They're all in good shape, but you no longer need them. So have a garage sale (or a yard sale, or a basement sale, or a . . .) and let someone else take advantage of your discards. Make sure it is a success by advertising in The Observer & Eccentric classified. It's the easiest way to tell more than 152,500 families throughout suburban Detroit that you are open for business and invite them to come treasure hunting. They'll find the valuables they have been looking for, and you'll come up with some extra money — a real treasure that you'll welcome for the summer.
