Take a look around when the Little Leaguers are playing and notice who's doing the umpiring.
Usually, it's boys in the 14-16-year-old age bracket.

bracket.

And what yours truly, who's done his share of calling balls and strikes over the years, admires, the young crop goes at the job the way it should be done.

Take the youngster we spotted trying to hitch a ride down Middle Belt the other evening after he had worked a game involving a couple of North Farmington Little League teams.

couple of North Farmington Little League teams. There he was with his big chest protector, mask and the shinguards on the outside of his pants legs. Now, son, umps wear their shin guards under their pant legs. You'll look more professional that way.

WE REALIZE WITH the type of tight pants the boys wear these days, there's no room to squeeze the shin guards under the pants. But, if you're going to try and copy the Nestor Chylaks of the American League, you MUST also dress

Not under any stretch of imagination.

Take the situation we ran into one evening in a championship game.

It involved a pair of Little League clubs and they are always the toughest to handle.

When the final inning began, the team in the field, which alsd was the home club, was in front by a couple of runs.

A walk, a hit and error got in one and put the tying run on base.

There were two out. But what does the pitcher do? He throws over to third trying to catch the man off base.

The toss was wild, the runner raced home with the equalizer and the man from first streak-ed around to third.

SO, WHAT DID THE PITCHER do? He threw

SO, WHAT DID THE PITCHER do? He threw to third again . . . and once more the ball sailed merrily beyond the sack.

The winning run rushed in . . . and who took the blame for the loss? Nobody else but the umpire umpire.

After all, the angry parents somehow had a notion the ump, not the pitcher, made those wild throws ... and maybe it was the ump, too, who walked a batter and the first baseman who booted an easy roller.

As we said, it takes a stout heart to survive in umpiring

It would begin to appear that the team flying Livonia colors is the one to beat for honors this year.
Two victories this past week, the second at the expense of defending champ Redford, upped the Hubert record to five wins and a tie in six outings.
What's more, the 3-2 conquest Hubert scored over Redford after beating Livonia's Village Rambler, 7-3, the previous day marked the second time in the young season that Hubert had decisioned Retford.
