—Beige was used to eliminate under-eye puffiness. Blush was applied along the edge of the cheek bone and into the temple area.

"The emphasis in Betty's makeup was directed by a hairstyle which brought attention to the mouth. Her mouth was carefully outlined with lip pencil (Xenon stressed the importance of this to eliminate the "bleeding" of lipstick into surrounding skin tissues). The outline was brightly brushed in with lipstick.

Betty's hairstyle is called a "graduated swan," which Xenon said is "good for any age group." There is no teasing, no back-combing in this style. Betty's straight hair was cut so it will flip up. Within minutes, she was having fun flipping her head and having her hair move with her, giving credence to Xenon's statement "hair is alive."

"In the late '70s, everybody can wear anything," Xenon emphasized. "The hairstyle should fit the lifestyle and be modern. If she needs the hair to be teased, it should be teased. The severe line of the 60s is gone. In the 70s you can do your own thing."

Rosalie's hair was cut for flattery into layers, varying from one to four inches in length.

Laura's hair had been home-bleached and was badly damaged. Xenon stated flatly "people don't have bleached hair any more. When you bleach hair, you take out all the red pigment. We are taking her back to chestnut brown and have reverse streaked it on the top."
