The hand in the diagram won't attract much attention as it's shown. East decided to help his partner with a lead and was fortunate his partner didn't have enough to bid. North either had a mental lapse or mental telepathy when he passed. His partner made two diamonds without a diamond in the declarer's hand, but it was a plus score.

North-South can make six spades or six hearts.

South bid seven diamonds and North bid seven spades. Down one!

The South who bid two diamonds received an early Christmas present. Congratulations to Joan Distler. She won the few red points she needed at the qualifying round of the Grand Nationals and is now a Life Master.
