

Modernist exhibits in library

A colorful exhibit of modern paintings, created by Carole Garczynski, brighten the Farmington Hills Community Library this month.

Mrs. Garczynski is a long-time member of the Farmington Artists Club and winner of numerous awards.

The local artist of the month show features several dramatic art pieces of substantial size and merit.

'Clockwork Blue' is a titillating, futuristic study, 'Strawberries,' which attracted much attention at the last Farmington Artist Club exhibition, is on display.

'Refractions' is a collage-sculpture focusing the viewer's attention with a subtle play of light and shadows that seem to move and reform, when seen from different distances and angles.

A number of her paintings have been shown in the Scarab Club and selected for juried shows.

MRS. GARCZYNSKI studied in Oakland Community College's art studies, and at Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association, under Cranbrook's Ray Fleming and internationally known colorist, Johanna Haas.

She judged the Farmington Historical Society art contest in 1974 and was artist for the Michigan Bell safety campaign in 1975.

She has held numerous offices in the Farmington Artists Club and is president of the Palette and Brush Club.

She also teaches seniors in The Gathering Place, at Mercy Center.

During the past few years, she and her building-contractor husband designed their own ultra-modern 'dream home' in Holly Hills Farms. The couple have three children, two teen-aged boys, and a seven year old daughter.

Carole Garczynski is local artist-of-the-month, whose one-woman show is now on display in Farmington Hills Community Library on Twelve Mile.

MR. AND MRS. KEITH MILLER, she is the former Marcia Ellerholz, of Livonia, announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, named Darlene Marion, born Jan. 22 in St. Mary hospital.

The infant's grandmothers are Mrs. Marion Miller of Livonia and Mrs. Lorraine Ellerholz of Farmington.

Genealogist to visit Adat Shalom synagogue

Dan Rottenberg, author of "Finding Our Fathers: A Guidebook to Jewish Genealogy," will address a meeting at Adat Shalom Synagogue at 8 p.m., Feb. 19.

The event is co-sponsored by the synagogue's Sisterhood and Men's Club. The synagogue is located at Middlebelt and Northwestern Highway.

In "Finding Our Fathers," he shares the enthusiasm and knowledge that has led him centuries back into his own roots.

In his talk he will outline the sources which are available to those interested in exploring their own genealogies.

He has said "Perhaps the best argument for tracing your family tree is simply that it's fun."

"Genealogy involves assembling seemingly unrelated tidbits until they all fit together into one big picture. It's an endless puzzle, because births, deaths and marriages keep occurring. Once you've dipped into genealogy, you're likely to be hooked for life."

Co-chairpersons for the program are Sharon Sukenik and Dr. Harvey Nussbaum.

The event is open to the community. There is no charge. A coffee hour will follow Rottenberg's talk.

Tipton Trio continues series

An evening of chamber music written for flute, cello, piano and harpsichord will be performed by the Tipton Trio, Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Birmingham Temple, 28611 Twelve Mile, Farmington Hills.

The concert is the third in the Vivace music series. Tickets, at $6, or $4 for students and senior citizens, can be obtained by calling Richard Margolis, 643-6661.

Albert Tipton, former principal flutist with Detroit Symphony Orchestra, founded the Tipton Trio 15 years ago with Mary Norris Tipton, piano and harpsichord, and Mario DiFiore, cellist with the Detroit Symphony. Since that time, the group has performed throughout North America, and recorded for Westminster Records.

The program in Farmington Hills will include works of Milhaud, J.S. Bach, Mozart, Bloch and Rameau, drawing from the baroque, classical and contemporary periods.

The music series will continue on April 16, when the Ars Musica of Ann Arbor will present an evening of 17th and 18th century entertainment with period instruments and costumes.

Scouts begin spring sales

Boy Scouts of Troop 179 launch their Early Bird Fertilizer Sale beginning Feb. 18, knocking on doors and receiving telephone orders.

The sale is an annual fundraising event for the troop, which offers attractive prices to those who respond, coordinated by the troop's fundraising chairman, Douglas G. Madaleno.

Scoutmaster Kenneth Miliken said: "This annual event has represented an important part of the troop's activities in the past several years, which is another medium for the scout to interact with his community in a positive and constructive way."

Persons wishing to order fertilizer by phone are invited to call Madaleno at 478-3556.

drink or a year to learn how to drive. You can't do both in the same year. I finally realized they were right. It helps if you can talk to your parents."

"They said that if I came home and I'd been drinking I wouldn't have the option of driving the car in the future."

"But they didn't tell you not to drink?"

Dave: "No, they didn't tell me not to drink. They knew that was up to me." "It's different in my family," an anonymous voice said. "My parents don't drink and they don't understand."

"Yeah, they must know but they don't say anything."

Rev. Howell stirred for the first time in his chair. "What would you want them to do?"

"Nothing. Just leave me alone. I don't need help. The drinking I do isn't out of control or anything."

"What would you want them to do if it was out of control?" Rev. Howell asked.

"My parents couldn't cope with it."

Howell: "How many of you would want somebody else to say something about it, maybe an old friend?"

Everyone spoke at once. "Right! A friend! If my parents said anything I wouldn't listen anyway!"

"If you had a friend and you thought he was drinking too much, what would you do?"

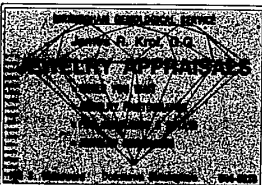

Bob: "I wouldn't do anything directly. I'd sort of lead up to it another way. There's a teacher in our school who's easy to talk to. He doesn't talk down to kids. Kids get offended when adults talk down to them."

Cathy: "Well, I haven't had that much experience, but I would want a friend to do that. I'd also tell parents to try to understand. Parents should help you get through a problem, not just push you off in a corner and tell you not to do it."

Dave: "My parents realized I was going to drink anyway, so they told me to drink at home. When you can get a beer from the refrigerator, it's no big deal to drink a lot at a party."

"How does the alcohol problem compare with the dope problem?"

Dave: "Dope is a problem too, but most kids don't think it's as addicting as alcohol and it doesn't mess up your body like alcohol does. Anyway, we can only deal with one problem at a time and the group decided to start with alcohol."
