Foley's Honey and Tar

HELPS COUGHS QUICKLY

Foley's Honey and Tar takes right hold of an obstinate cough and gives quick relief.

It is a healing ointment on the inflamed membranes that line the throat, and it soothes the inflamed tissues. It stops the tickling, loosens and clears the throat, and it is the best remedy for croup, whooping cough, and all other coughs.

Miss Ida Steele, who had suffered eleven and a half years in the Columbia school at Detroit, was transferred, at her request, to the Ravenswood school, which makes it much better for her in going to and from her duties as teacher. It may be interesting to some to know that Superin-

ACUTE POISONING.

The Quick Use of Mustard and Water Has Saved Many a Life.

When a case of acute poisoning occurs it generally has one of three origins. The man has swallowed the poison by mistake for medicine; he has tried to commit suicide, or he has eaten something that for one reason or another is not fit for food. When we hear that a whole family or an entire community has suffered from poison the third reason will be the correct one. It may be that the food taken is inherently poisonous, as in the case of poisonous mushrooms, or it may be that food originally pure has suffered chemical changes because it has been kept too long or has not been properly cured for.

The symptoms of acute poisoning are generally so terrifying that the doctor is quickly summoned, and that is well for he will be needed.

In many cases it is not possible to tell at once just what kind of poison is causing the trouble, but it is certain that whatever it is it must be removed from the body as quickly as possible. There are two ways of removing poison quickly from the stomach—either by a stomach pump, which the doctor will bring and use, or by an emetic.
The simple mustard and water emetic can do no harm, and will bring it up in a few minutes. Plain table mustard—a tablespoonful stirred in half a pint of slightly warm water and swallowed quickly—has saved many a life. Besides washing out the stomach, it has a slightly stimulating effect, which is an excellent thing, since in cases of poisoning often followed by a dangerous collapse.

For that reason do everything you can to support the strength of a badly poisoned person. Even after the stomach has been emptied and the acute symptoms have subsided the danger of collapse may be very great. Warm blankets and hot water bottles are helpful, but it is not of much use to give stimulants by the mouth until the stomach has been emptied.

When the poison is a strong acid the stomach pump cannot be used for fear of further injury to the already lacerated gullet, and the emetic is the best treatment we can adopt. In cases of food poisoning the tube is a valuable adjunct to the treatment. The collapse may be serious enough to require energetic treatment with stimulants, either by injecting strychnine or by giving brandy or coffee or both, either by mouth or by means of an enema, according to the collusion of the patient.—Youth's Companion.

Black Bucks of India.

The black buck of India is a very graceful animal, weighing between thirty and fifty pounds. The hide of the male when full grown is of inky blackness; on the back, while the belly is as white as snow, the contrast being very striking. The horns are black and spiral in shape and in length average about eighteen inches, although they have been known to reach twenty-six inches.
The animals are usually found in herds and are difficult to approach on foot, as the bucks toss their heads in the air from time to time in a very graceful manner, and some of them are almost sure to detect any attempt at stalking.

How Fish Rise and Sink.

The air bladder of fishes is the provision within their bodies which enables them to rise or fall in the water. Near the bottom the weight of the superabundant waters compresses the air bladder, and consequently the body of the fish shrinks until its bulk is equal with the water it displaces. In the middle and upper regions the bladder expands in proportion, so that the body of the fish is always equibundant with the water in which it floats.
Thus, according to the dilation or contraction of the air bladder, the fish can regulate its depth in the water at pleasure.

A Local Magnate.

"Are you the postmaster?"
"Yes."

"Gimme two stamps."

"Here ya are. I also sell dry goods, groceries, and hardware. You need anything of th' sort?"

"No. I'm just passing through here. Fact is, I'm on my way to the station now."

"That so? I operate th' only hack line in town. Sam, my driver, will take ya to the depo' for a quarter."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Men With Memories.

Seneca the Wise could repeat 2,000 words in the uninterrupted succession in which they were read to him. The greatest Roman orator before Cicero, Hortensius, could recite all the prices given at a public auction. The historians, who considered it a great art to forget what they had learned, learned the Persian language inside of a year.

JUDGE K. P. ROCKWELL
Candidate for Oakland County Circuit Judgeship.

In this impression of 'The Era' appears the announcement of Hon. K. P. Rockwell regarding his candidacy for circuit judge, of Oakland County at the March primary. Judge Rockwell has made a splendid record as a lawyer and six years prosecuting attorney and has just been elected for the third time Probate Judge. "K. P." as he is popularly known all through Oakland County needs no encomium at our hands, as his life is an inspiration to the young man. As a lawyer he is a deep careful student, as prosecutor he was one of the best the County has ever had, and "Old Oakland" has had some good ones, and as Judge of Probate he stands at the head of Michigan Judges. His work on the constitutional commission was highly meritorious. Judge Rockwell is still a young man and his desire to round out his career as Circuit Judge of his County is most commendable. With his deep learning and uniform courtesy, and judicial mind he will make good and 'The Era' takes pleasure in seconding his nomination. His decision to enter the contest is received with approbation, in fact, we have yet to hear a man in Avon say but that he was heartily in favor of Judge Rockwell at the coming primary.—Rochester Era.
