One of the most severe hail storms in many years visited this section last Saturday evening, knocking the leaves, blossoms and fruit from the trees and destroying much of the garden truck with "nerve" enough to peak through the ground. Hail stones as big as a hickory nut filled the air for about five minutes, leaving the ground as white as any snow storm. Numerous reports of broken windows come to us, the Talbot greenhouse losing about a hundred, while Salow brothers lost some 700 panes of glass. Had there been a wind accompanying the storm undoubtedly the damage would have been much greater.
