Poultry Flocks Smaller.

Reports recently gathered concerning 5,298 flocks of poultry on farms and in small towns in all parts of the country show that the average number of heas per fock this year is 107, as compared with 140 in 1914. This information, which was obtained by an incubator manufacturer in the middle West, indicates that sibritings of supply has been an important factor in producing present high prices for pool try and eggs. It appears to produce the state of the same acceptance of the same acceptance of the same of the same acceptance of the same of immediate produce—a policy the effects of which are now heaf gelt by the entire country—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Funny Big Boy Scouts.

Two Ohio members of the officers' reserve corps at Fort Berjanth Harstreet, north the technical hith school campus, two weeks not. They passed a group of small boys, who pased, so the men thought, in tremendous admiration and awe. Just as the bear-officers-maybe puffed out their chests in just pride, one of the young irre-pressibles] shouted:

'Oh, Jimmy, look at the funny big Boy Scouts."—Indinantolis News.
