CHAPTER VIII.

"Inank You, Unclea"

APPAIN ELISHA had been pretty well statisfied with the result of his visit to young Dunn at the latter's office. Malcoim had surrendered, perhaps not gracefully or unconditionally, but he had surrendered, and the condition-secrecy—was one which the captain himself had suggested.

Captain Elisha found some solace and forgefulness of the unpleasant life he was leading in helping the stricken Mordarty family. Annie, the maid at the spartment, he swore to secrecy. She must, not tell Misy Carotine of his visits to her parents home.
Dr. Henry also, though he could not understand why, promised silence. Car-
