

Johnny Can Travel Alone But It Takes Planning

If you're planning to send son Johnny to visit Aunt Alice in Chicago or daughter Mary to camp this summer, the Travelers Aid Society (TAS) wants to talk to you.

TAS, a Torch Drive service, wants to know:

- Can Johnny and Mary read? Can they tell time? Can they order from a menu? Are they scared?

For the child traveling alone, points out Marvin R. Kornegger, executive director of Detroit's TAS, more than the normal amount of planning is required. The trip can be a safe and happy one, but there are many road-blocks to be cleared ahead of time.

A travel plan they consider unwise. For example, says Mrs. Helen Duppernell, a TAS supervisor, "A child of seven, his first time on a bus, can make a trip to Birmingham, Mich., from Detroit without any trouble at all. But Birmingham, Ala., is out of the question."

"They know they're going to see Aunt Suzy," she said, "but they don't know anything more about Aunt Suzy."

Before agreeing to shepherd any children on their way, Travelers Aid insists upon an interview with the child and his family and upon verification that he is expected at the other end of the line.

Then there's the matter of whether the child really wants to go. One request was turned down after the eight-year-old girl in question piped up, "It
