A WALLED CITY OF WOMEN

A little, sunny village has grown up inside a high wall in France within the past few years. The houses stand in straight even rows and along one side of the city wall is a long dormitory for single women. There are many more of them than of the families in the small little houses. The village is made up of women—old, young, middle-aged—whose faces, hands and hair slowly are turning yellow from the powder which it is said will eventually affect their lungs. But most of them are refugees and the best they are giving up their good looks, their health, and perhaps their lives in the munition factory, is of little moment to them. They have come into the walled town from ruined villages and devastated farms with their frightened little children, their despairing old people, carrying all their earthly possessions in tiny bundles. In their individual lives there is no future; in all their world there is no future but the conquest of the Hun.

No one comes into this little war community that centers around the big munitions plant but those who work there. Because of the danger and the blighting yellow powder, the work is highly paid and all the workers are volunteers.

The women wear overalls or apron dresses, some of black, some, nondescript. The dull garb harmonizes with the yellowing faces and despairing eyes.

Into this modern valley of death of despair the Hun Triangle has flashed the first message of hope. The Y. W. C. A. foyer is the only recreational center within reach. The cars which find cafes at the end of the line a mile away, stop running at seven o'clock to give fuel. The city is three miles from the factory.

"My problem," writes the Y. W. C. A. secretary in charge, "is to keep the women occupied in the evenings, to give them some healthy amusement so that they will forget their sorrows and go to bed and sleep, physically tired out from playing."

She goes on to tell of some of the women and girls who come to the

HAVE STEADILY PLOUGHED

Beginning with our entry into the war the Enterprise has been "plugging" away for the liberal purchase of Liberty Bonds, Thrift Stamps and all other calls of our government, the boys across the water and at camp and now that we are on the "last lap," and perhaps the most trying, we again want to remind our people that they have a duty to perform.

Our boys are still overseas and must remain there for some time; there are also millions of people, our erstwhile enemies included, who will literally starve if we neglect them, and if we let them starve to death we are no better than those who caused the situation.

Perhaps our pleadings have been monotonous to some of our readers, but when you stop to consider the great task accomplished you will admit that it was those very "monotonous" reminders of the press of the country that produced the great result.

But don't think you can stop now that hostilities have ceased. There are many things yet to be accomplished, much expense yet to meet, and there is need for another Liberty Loan—perhaps the largest yet asked for—and it must be forthcoming if we secure a genuine world peace.

Begin to save for the next loan while you are paying for the last one.

Notice the date on the label of your paper if it is an unwrapped one. If it indicates that your time has expired, it is up to you to renew it if you wish to continue on our subscription list.

The War Industries Board forbids carrying a delinquent list, and the penalty is failure to get our supply of print paper. See?

Gentlemen:

I notice in your issue of November 1, 1918, that the War Board of Farmington Township have taken the liberty of making a published statement that is evidently intended as an insult to me personally. If they would take trouble enough to find out the truth they would find that my subscription for bonds of the 4th issue was subscribed in West Bloomfield Township.

I have had the records of subscription to bonds of the 4th issue in West Bloomfield carefully examined and find no record of any purchase of bonds in this township made by either Fred M. Warner or Homer Wolcott. Surely these men who are property owners in West Bloomfield are they not as disloyal by not purchasing bonds in West Bloomfield as I by not purchasing bonds in Farmington.

The matter looks to me and my friends, to be not a move against me, not because they think I am unpatriotic, but because I have been identified as against the Covert Road Law. I am perfectly willing to place my reputation as a patriotic citizen against any of the so called War Board who signed the article in question.

I would also like to have the war board show to the people where the money loaner's quota comes in under the mortgage tax law.
