is, by acciore assumption of the strain of t Sally came down to breakfast at 11 o'clock. That was her usual time. She was found of lying abed mornings—what did it matter? Why rise early? There was melting to before night; Just string around, going down town etopoing, or to the park.
Sally yawned. "The coffee's cold," she complained.
"The sorry, miss," answered Jane."I tried to keep it hot. Is the omelted if right?"
"I don't care for omelet, take it away," fretted the girl. "The 'not hungry."
Sho pushed back her miss rose and away." fretted the girl. "I'm not hougry."

She pushed hack her plate, rose and went late the drawing room, where her mother, in an easy chair, perused the latest novel, and her sister gazed almitesstly into the street.
"I thought you were never coming," fretted Mande, turning to her sister, "Well, I'm here, but I wish I'd stuyed abed. It's stupid sitting round walfing for something to happen."

ed abod. It's stuping string round waiting for something to happen."
"I've been up half an hour." Maude bonsted. "What's on for tonight?"
"It's the dance at Kate Osborne's, a great affair, but I'm getting bored with oarties."

"Oh, I remember. I shall wear my pink gauze. There! I forgot to order slippers. Mamma, will you phone for silppers. Mamma, will you phone to my silppers?"

Her mother did not look up from her story, but answered absently: "Don't bother me. What a chatter you muke! Do be quiet."
Sally had but recently graduated from a fashlonable, boarding school. Mande had finished a year before. "We'll order the car and take a ride to the park," suggested for the park," suggested Mande. "I can't stay here; it's dull."
"I shall stay where I am," declared Sally from the comfort of her cushions; "you can go if you wish."
"You're always selbah!" retorted Mande. "You know papa won't let me! go alone."

"You're always senses to won't let me go alone."

Insel Gordon was president of the young people's Red Cross club. She had organized a circle of girls, and they were working enthushastically—knittlen, sewing, folding surplead dressings, taking work home, doing their utmost for the soidiers at war. To them life meant helping others. Life was earnest; they had a purpose. "Can't we get some new members" naked Hazel. They were gathered in her cosy. parlor, sewing, their voices buzzling.

"There's Maude and Sally Stimson; if we could only get them." suggested if we could only get them," suggested Ida Black; "but I wouldn't dare ask sning. "They've got too much money," said

"They've got too muca moure, ""They, wouldn't think they could work," added Nina Baker. "If I twas a party they'd come," "But, for the soldiers!" flashed 'Hazel. "We need them, and they need them, and they need to sk them to Join?" "You won't cet them." "You won't cet them." predicted Agnes Snow. "They'd feel above us, and they need work."

Agnes. Snow. "They'd feel above us, and they never work."

"It's time they, did," asserted Hazel. "We'll see."

Hazel did get them. She called at the Stimson mansion, walked lightly up the marble steps and rang the the Stimson mansion, walked lightly up the marble steps and rang the work of the solders." It was a step of the solders." It was a step of the solders." It was a step of the solders." She cathused, "doing the little time we can to help, and we need you. Will you join us? We'd so love to have you with us!"

"Why, I never sewed in my life," confessed Sally. "I don't know how, and I can't kult."

"Til, teach you." smilled Hazeli "you'll find it quite easy, and we have good times, too."

"Sally became interested. It was a new blen to be needed. "I'll be something to do -1 for one will join. Whad do you say, Maude?"

Mande, though the elder, was led by her stronger siste the liling." These forms and the seed of the liling." These forms had not ever thought before there was heed for their help in the world. Great was the-astonishment at the club when Hazel appeared with the new members, and they gave them a hearty welchme. Sally soon learned and worked till her unaccustomed-inagers ached. When the afternoon was over she was lired, but her heart glowed with a satisfaction she had never felt before. She was good and kind; all that was needed was the right influence to brish ner out. "Tan't it glorious, Manude?" Sally exclaimed. "I' felt as though I'd really been good for something. I never knew I for the soldiers. They even gave up dances and the theaters that they might have more time for work; besides, something blight had come late, and thought us green-horse."

Sally and Mande went every day to work for the soldiers. They even gave up dances and the theaters that they might have more time for work; besides, something blight had come late, in the time, just like my grand-mother," she sald.

"Inn't it better than doing nothing, mamma?" asked the sensible Sally. "I never known of the sall in the any mandema

DID WORK OF HIGH ORDER

Designs Wrought by Ancient Peruvia
Dyers Have Been Given Much
Praise by Experts.

The ancients of Peru, by a curlous coincidence—for there could not possibly have been any intercourse with their contemporaries in India and Egypt—seem to have used much the same kind of processes in printing their designs upon the fabrics they manufactured. Both Herodotus and Pilay, among early historians, have told us about the cloth of vegetable fiber made by the ancients; but in all likelihood the fabrics of the Peruvians were of even a more remote date. In some respects the methods of today per store, the cloth difference consists in the patterns now being engraved upon copper reliers and serveal colors being printed at one time. Just as today the colors have a material, but is secured by means of a substance known as morant, so of a substance known as morant, so the material, but is secured by mean of a substance known as mordant, so did the Peruvians make use of property which caused the dye to adhere and to withstand a test of thousands of years' were and tear. Experts have declared that in the-direction of technical and artistic value the designs in question have no equal.

to Him Unfair.

Set strategy doesn't always work. But the German mind can't understand anyone's abandoning a fixed method.

"The sorest man I have ever seen," said an American aviator, "was Lieutenant Melhopf, the star Boche flyer, when he was nipped by Lieutenant Avery, Menkopf was Baron Richtören's successor and the best flyer that Germany had lett.

"When Avery tackled him, he abandong all set principles of air strategy, simply sailed in and opened fire without houlding in prelluinary amenurers. He brought his man down is about three seconds, and this was his first Boch buttleyout Innded, he was purple with rage, and as far as I could make out his muln complaint could be translated in this fashion:

How They Conversed.

An American linison officer who knew little French and a French artillery officer who knew little English had important business together during the height of the recent fighting. "Heart," said the commandant to a young sergeant, "I have seen you talking to Americans several times. Can you speak English?"

"No, mon commandant," answered Feer I simuly.

Henri simply.

Henri simply.

For all that, Henry and the American officer were soon engaged in vivacious conversation. At its conclusion the commandant turned to Henri. "But you speak English very well," he said.

"No, mon commandant," Heari still Insisted. "We were talking in Ger-man."

Back Feel Achy After Grip?

OLDS and influenza leave thousands with weak kidneys and aching backs. The kidneys have to do most of the work of fighting off a cold or a contagious disease. They weaken—slow up. Then you feel dull and draggy, irritable or nervous, and have headaches, dizzy spells, lame back, backache, sore joints and irregular kidney action. Give the kidneys quick help and avoid serious kidney troubles. Don's Kidney Fills are always in unusual demand after grip epidemics as so many people have learned their reliability. Don's are used the world over. They are recommended by your own friends and neighbor.
