Young fans meet their TV favorite

Meeting Mister Rogers, host of the children's television show "Mister Rogers Neighborhood," was a bonus for youngsters attending recent premier performances of "Summer Snow."

The children's musical, which had its world premier at the Music Hall Center in Detroit, is based on a short opera Fred Rogers wrote and presented on his TV program. The musical is about a good little girl who does a bad thing by freezing her friends into statues during a summer snow brought on with the help of a witch's spell.

Boys and girls who got to visit with Mister Rogers on stage after the show (you can see the prop trolley car in the background and the snow) include (above) Mary Ann Bommarito of Farmington and her daughters Jennifer (center) and Mara; Jan Albright of Birmingham with her children Craig and Tina; and Mrs. Stanley Finsilver of West Bloomfield and her daughter Amy.

m.m.memos

"If you don't have anything yet to write about this week how about my rummage sale?" I sure could use the publicity!" I figured the query showed a certain amount of business acumen and promotional knowledge on the part of my youngest, so I agreed to take the matter under consideration, even while pointing out that a classified ad in another section of the paper was going to do her a lot more good.

With everyone else otherwise employed she seems to have inherited our family's share of the kind of small business that makes suburban an entertaining place to live in the summer.

WE'VE JOINED in the phenomenon of the '70s a few times, and if the cleanup hasn't been tremendous from a financial point of view, at least it's done wonders for our closets and drawers.

We don't have garage sales because our garage is full of cars, but we call it a front lawn sale, add some kitchen goodies to the attic odds and hope for good weather. We don't always get it.

Several years ago, when our oldest decided on a sale to help support her going to college habit, I remember she made several batches of cookies and candy, which sold quite well, and several dishes for plastic sheets to cover the used items which didn't sell nearly as well.

STILL, BUSINESS was good enough to try a couple of repairs, and this year we decided was a good one for the closet-clearing act.

We unearthed a few longlost treasures in the process and piled up the things to sell. We almost included a few things that were supposed to go into the laundry. We delegated to our youngest the job of sorting and marking, with the promise that that job also carried with it the profit from the sale.

After considerable prodding, many roles of tape and boxes of pins and a lot of decision-making, she came up with a tableful of saleable "it" items ready to move out into the lawn—it didn't rain.

By next week, she should have enough pocket money for her stay at music camp. And I have some sem-clean closets.

Glazes mark 50th year

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Glaze were honored with a buffet party in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary, in the garden of their niece and nephew's Farmington home.

Mr. and Mrs. Blaine W. Ford arranged the surprise with the help of the Glaze's son, Roger, and his fiancée Terri Hartwell, for sixty guests.

The couple were wed June 26, 1926, in Yale, Michigan, and live in Detroit. They are members of Henderson Memorial Church, and he is a Mason.

Glaze is now retired from Burroughs Corp., where he had been employed for 47 years.
