

Mrs. Philip Burns of Southfield looks over some of the Spanish imports to be sold during the "Bazaar Espanol" scheduled at Providence Hospital.

Providence bazaar will feature Spanish imports

Handcrafted gift items imported from Spain will be featured at "Bazaar Espanol" July 28-30 in the Providence Hospital Fisher Center auditorium.

The sale of "trinkets and treasures" is sponsored by the volunteer members of Our Lady of Providence League and will be held from 1:30-3:30 p.m. on July 28 and 30 and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on July 29. Proceeds will go to the hospital building fund.

The exceptionally low prices of the gift items are made possible through the generosity of a hospital benefactor who is terminating a flourishing import business, according to Mrs. Martin Buckner, president of the volunteer organization available for purchase are handcrafted porcelain figurines in the tradition of Lladro, jewelry fashioned by the artisans of Toledo, Spanish dolls in native costumes, handbags and pillow covers woven in Granada, and a wide variety of imported handmade specialties including wine boxes, miniature chess sets, vases and wall decorations.

The Providence Hospital building fund helps provide the financial support for the hospital's expansion program. Construction is presently underway on a major three level structure which will enable the hospital to continue to provide the public with the best available health care and to reduce the cost to the patient.

In addition to their fund raising program, members of Our Lady of Providence League volunteer their time and talent throughout the year performing many of the non-medical functions that are vital in maintaining standards of excellent patient care.

USDA disputes advice

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is questioning the home canning recommendations made in an article in the June issue of Consumer Reports magazine.

Consumer Reports recommendations are "scientifically determined to be adequate to assure destruction of micro-organisms" that consumers who can food at home should continue to rely on the standard pressure and cooking time recommendations established by competent processing authorities.

Time and cooking pressure are very important because bacteria which cause food poisoning, such as botulism, can develop in improperly processed foods, government officials said.

Most cases of food poisoning in the U.S. including botulism, are traced to improperly home canned foods.

In a telegram to Consumers Union of the United States, Inc., Mt. Vernon, N.Y., publisher of Consumer Reports magazine, the USDA and FDA requested an opportunity to review "any data to support such a broad reduction in processing."

USDA has available publications on the home canning of fruits, vegetables, pickles, relishes, meat and poultry. The times and temperatures recommended in these publications (HG-9, "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables"; HG-42, "Making Pickles and Relishes at Home"; and HG-106, "Home Canning of Meat and Poultry") have been scientifically tested in laboratories and have proved to be safe and effective over the years.
