

Lions seek sight problems

The sightmobile is manned by Lions club members who do the screening and are careful to differentiate from vision tests given by professionals.

Barr says that if a deficiency is discovered the person is given a card recommending he see a professional. All who take the tests are given a card with scores.

Last year more than 500 persons took advantage of the screening tests, and Barr says, "Some of the kids we tested really had bad vision."

His concern was that the youngsters took their cards home and reported the recommendations to their parents.

There are two Lions clubs in the community, the new one is a morning club, the other an evening one.

There will also be a receptacle for the collection of used glasses, hearing aids and electric shavers at the sightmobile.

In the two years since it was organized, the Farmington Community Lions Club has sent 2,100 pairs of used glasses to an institute in Georgia which processes them and redistributes them all over the world. The agency employs the handicapped in the workshop, and they also repair the shavers and hearing aids for further use.

The new Lions club also works on projects with the Cloverdale School and the Oak Hill Nursing Home, both in Farmington.

Ron Fawcett is president of the club.
