Legal language

Law course offered at OCC

A basic, practical laymen's legal course will be offered at Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge Campus beginning Sept. 21 and continuing for ten weeks. The class will meet from 7:30-9:30 p.m. on Tuesday evenings.

According to course instructor Sanford Meider, the practice of law has long been a highly complex and secretive profession about which most people have little understanding. He sees this as self-defeating and plans an offering a course which will give a practical, step-by-step explanation of aspects of the law which involve many people.

Areas to be covered will include the buying and selling of homes, using the small claims court, how the court system actually works, what happens during a divorce or child custody dispute and how garnishments and attachments work.

Meider, a member of the Oakland County Bar Association, Michigan Bar Association and the American Bar Association, plans to have a specific question-and-answer session at the end of each meeting so that students' specific problems can be aired and dealt with in an atmosphere of understanding.

Guest lecturers on specific areas of concern such as workmen's compensation or mental health will be offered if class interest warrants.
