By LORRAINE MCCLISH

A Southfield man who says he has spent a lot of time dabbling in art has won a first prize award that has put his humorous pen and ink drawing on the cover of Redwaver Detroit 1977, the city's calendar for the coming year.

It is the third award won by John Moga of 1865 1/2 Mile Drive, who is studying architecture in Lawrence Institute of Technology. His first art award came when he was a student at Southfield High School and his work in a scholastic art competition brought him a blue ribbon in Michigan and made him a finalist in national competition.

Last year a black and white pen and ink drawing of a city skyline, submitted to the Junior League of Detroit in the competition for the 1976 calendar, brought him a third place win.

This year he said he had more time to devote to his art and put a watercolor wash over his pen and ink drawing to win the top prize of $200.

Moga spent a year in advertising art at the Center for Creative Studies before he switched to architecture and LIT. He now serves as chief architect for the school's Tech News.

OUT OF THE winners, one chosen for the cover of the calendar and others for "People of Detroit" is the title of this whimsical study drawn by John Moga for the cover of the 1977 city calendar.

the 12 months of the year, three art from Southern Oakland County, Kyle Ziegler, Susan Lila and Kenneth Schelling. Schelling, of 539 Benaville, Birmingham, is a second time winner in the contest. A student at the Center of Creative Studies, he spotlighted the ethnic heritage of Detroit in a montage of the Riverfront Ethnic Festivals. His artwork is illustrated for 1977's July.

Ziegler, of 3214 Fieldbrook West, Bloomfield, also is a student at Center for Creative Studies. His winning work is seen with the calendar's October. He calls a "Youth and Progress."

Mr. Lila's work is seen on the calendar's June, a design piece of 14 colorful spinners of racing sail boats on the Detroit River. She too is a student at the Center for Creative Studies and lives at 2701 Warmingdale, Farmington Hills.

The calendar, a community service project of the Junior League, aims to visually promote Detroit, while providing a show case for young artists. It is in its third year of publication. The illustrations in the calendar were selected by professional judges from 110 entries.

THIS CALENDAR is available for $2.50 at all Hudson Stores, at book and gift shops throughout the metropolitan area and at the Junior League office, 32 Lake Shore, Grosse Pointe 48236.

There is adequate space on the calendar for a company logo and name of the order is placed soon enough. Information concerning wholesale prices for quantity purchases is available by calling the league at 881-0940.

Funds realized from calendar sales will be returned to the Detroit community through new and on going league projects.

These projects include Operation LINC at 1522 Jefferson, an agency that finds human and material resources to meet the needs of grass root organizations in Wayne County.

Another on going project is joint funding with the Junior League of Birmingham and The Friends of Belle Isle of a new master plan for Belle Isle by landscape architect Dan Riles.

The festive orange and yellow pavilions on the Kern Block is a Junior League project.

The league funds JUV, Job Opportunities for Youth, a referral agency for youths seeking employment in the community.
