gress, big deal. He never addressed the questions.

But students from Southfield Lathrop High School, supporting Brodhead, disagreed.

Burdick took a low cut at Brodhead. He didn't talk about who he was qualified to avoid the question, countered Steve Lukacs, a Lathrop junior.

All five candidates for the Congressional seat showed up for the debate and several voters said the debate did prove valuable.

I'd have to say that it was interesting to have all parties represented, said Martin Lamb of Southfield. Their representatives several viewpoints to think about.

But what was missing were the direct questions from the audience, he continued. This format doesn't bring out how people think. When you leave out questions from the audience, you omit an important part of campaigning.

"ACCUSATIONS MADE" at the end of such a debate do nothing to upgrade the integrity of the campaign.

J. Anne Smith, a Farmington Hills councilwoman, thought the debate really wasn't a debate because Brodhead wasn't given an opportunity to clear up those accusations made by his opponent.

He left right after the thing was over and didn't stop to back up his statements. Where was he going to back up those charges? Ms. Smith asked.

I think the debate went well and we got to a lot of issues the candidates wanted to discuss, concluded Fay O'Hare, moderator of the Tuesday night debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Observer & Eccentric.
