

Dressing Your HOME

Give the blahs the slipcover

Slipcovers are in vogue again. It's been around for a long time, but it's back in fashion. In the past, the primary reason for a slipcover was to protect upholstery. Now it's a fashion statement. It's the furniture of the 1970s.

Now the trend is to slipcover. The growing desire to change the home scene more frequently than upholstery will allow is one reason. Having slipcovers made while the upholstery is still in top condition gives the homemaker a chance to create a new mood for a party or a season.

LAURETTA REGAN

Another reason is that in purchasing new furniture, the homemaker many times can't make a decision about what fabric to put on the chair or sofa because of a decision that must be lived with for a few years.
