

Thespians on the mall

Early Christmas decor

Christmas in the years around 1720 is depicted in the decorations in the Greenfield Village building known as Secretary Pearson House because it once was occupied by the first secretary of state of New Hampshire. Holly is entwined in the chandelier, and in the center of the dining room table is a pyramid of imported fruits, oranges from Seville and limes, lemons and pineapples from the West Indies. These luxury items were used to show that the owner of the home was a man of means. At the conclusion of the meal they were eaten. The house is one of many decorated for Christmas at the village, and the displays will be up until Jan. 2.
