

Special focuses on busing

Debate in School Desegregation Working "An in-depth look at the school busing issue can be seen in the Detroit area at 10 p.m. Fridays on Channel 56. Taking the affirmative side in discussions are representatives from the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, including chairman Arthur Flemming. The commission spent two years studying school busing and desegregation and issued a report this August. The 30-page report noted there is one conclusion that stands above all others: desegregation works.

On The Air

On the other side of the issue are representatives from the country's largest and most powerful busing group, the National Association of Non-Busing School Boards (NANS). Among the NANS representatives will be Sue Miles, chairwoman of the Board of Education in Prince Georges County, Md.
