Handicapped are sought in Outreach Month drive

December has been designated Special Education Outreach Month in Oakland County by a group of parents hoping to spread information on programs available for retarded and handicapped persons. The Oakland Parent Advisory Committee is urging parents of young persons up to 25 years of age and with special educational needs to check out possibilities with the directors of special education in the various school districts.

There are children in Oakland County who because of a physical, mental or emotional handicap have trouble learning in a regular school situation, a statement from the PAC indicated.

If you have a youngster, birth to 25 years of age, who is slow, has a short attention span, is hyperactive, hard of hearing, partially or totally blind, is orthopedically handicapped, doesn't relate to people or has other emotional problems, he or she may need special programs.

Parents are urged to request of their school district a meeting of the Educational Planning and Placement Committee (EPPC) for an evaluation of their child's needs.

Parents also are advised to take to the meeting a special advocate who is knowledgeable about law and special education programs. The PAC can recommend persons for this function or one can be located by calling the Michigan Association for Children With Learning Disabilities, 424-4414; the Michigan Association for Emotionally Disturbed Children, 873-3660; or the Oakland County Association for Retarded Citizens, 335-1222. Oakland Parent Advisory Committee members include Patricia Berg of Avon Dale, Mary Lou Herrold of Birmingham.

Dorothy Collins of Bloomfield Hills, Betty Driscoll, Clarkstonville, Anthony Pump of Farmington Hills, Leanne J. Heston, Nedra O'Leary of Southfield, Donald Grogan of West Bloomfield and Jane Steffen of Troy.
