Older adults thrive at OU

Lucille Epstein of Oak Park has a message for older adults who might be sitting in a chair watching life go by.

"If you are sitting in a chair and you are happy, stay there. If you feel like you need a change, think about doing something about it. There are people around who can help you."

Lucille is a counselor and trainer for the Older Adult Project sponsored by the Continuum Center for Adult Counseling and Leadership Training at Oakland University.

She will take a Personal Growth for Older program into the Tindal Recreation Center in Detroit Feb. 2-March 2. The program will be open to the public, starting with an orientation session from noon-2 p.m. Feb. 2 and running for the same two-hours Mondays and Wednesdays through March 2.

Mrs. Epstein moved into her present line of work when her children were growing up several years ago. She attended personal growth programs at the Continuum Center, worked as a group leader at the center, completed her master's degree at the University of Michigan and is now counseling others.

"We find that older people are vital, energetic and eager to learn. Many of them have bought the myths about aging, the myths that say old people stop living and start being a problem after a certain age, but the myths aren't true unless you make them true," she says.

"People say 'old dogs can't learn new tricks,' or 'what do you expect from me at my age?' as if that's the way it is and nothing can be changed."

Farmington Community Center at 12:30 p.m. for the Michigan Opera Theatre's matinee performance of "The Magic Flute," sung in English. Package-priced tickets at $11 includes transportation and orchestra seat, now on sale in the center.
