ACCENT

Jewelry is the final accent to today's fashion scene. The elan that makes the difference. And it might not mean a stop off at the poorhouse to carry it off.

David Frederick, of Frederick Jewelers, says the answer might be more accessible than you think. He suggests checking the jewelry you have now and reworking it.

Take out those old stickpins that are gathering dust, polish them up and use them. In today's fashion they are worn to enhance a scarf or compliment a suit lapel. Wear them on a tie or with your new vested suit.

As for pocket watches and chains, they go with today's vest like ham and eggs.

If you find some diamonds or colored stones while you are rummaging through the drawers, new jewelry can be had at a minimum of expense with the help of the highly skilled designers and jewelers in the Bloomfield Hills store.

The foremost thought should be on quality, a commodity which everyone seeks in the 70s, says Frederick, and this can be easily had, coupled with the combination of white and yellow gold that is the look of today and tomorrow

Sporty little watches by Gloria Vanderbilt accent a wardrobe and offer an instant status symbol.
