FARM ANIMALS

HALT HOG CHOLERA RAVAGES

Farmers Should Insist on Animals Being Vaccinated by Competent Veterinarian.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Farmers should insist that all the stock hogs which they purchase for feeding purposes should be properly vaccinated by competent and conscientious veterinarians in order to prevent the spread of hog cholera. Unlike the larger stock yards of the country, which are properly protected by qualified government representatives, many of the smaller local yards are entirely without safeguards against cholera. Immature hogs go from the farms of origin mainly because of lack of feed or on account of disease. The purchaser who buys such sick hogs the market for feeding purposes usually introduces disease into his home herd. To stimulate production and to conserve our available pork supply none but vaccinated, immunized healthy hogs should be maintained in the feed lot. If the farmer wishes to aid in increasing food supplies, he should help increase our hog supply by routing disease.

The practice of buying hogs from public stock yards for feeding and stocking purposes, a custom which has been intensified in this war emergency, has to a large degree complicated the work of controlling hog cholera. In many cases, owing to improper equipment for immunization and disinfection of hogs, new centers of infection have been introduced in communities previously free from the disease, and the movement of hogs from public stock yards having no supervision by state or federal authorities and where treatment for the prevention of cholera is not compulsory is a serious handicap in the fight to prevent the spread of infection.

Some losses have resulted from shipments of stocker hogs even when originating at public stock yards having government inspection, particularly in the early beginning of extensive movements of these animals for feeding purposes. Several factors were responsible, such as improper equipment for immunization and disinfection, insufficient doses of serum for hogs exposed to infection, the application of treatment promiscuously by anyone chosen by the buyer of the hogs, and the use of the serums in treatment, which produces an immunity of very short duration. These are proofs positive that "haste makes waste," but these objectionable features are being overcome. Where proper equipment is being installed, dosage of serum increased and the treatment placed in the hands of competent veterinarians, losses occurring in shipments of this character have been reduced to a minimum.

There is reason to believe that with the various agencies in each state, such as county agents and farm bureaus, interested in the increased production of meat animals, a system of exchange could be established to bring together farmers with a surplus of hogs and no feed and those having more feed than hogs, with a view of having the transfer of these animals effected locally and avoid the long and dangerous journey to a public stock market and back to the farm sometimes in the same community.

SELF-FEEDERS HELP RAISERS

Campaign in Maine Resulted in Securing 15 Per Cent Increase Over 1917 Production.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

An increased production campaign carried on by county agents and farm bureaus in Maine has resulted in a 15 per cent increase over last year in the number of hogs raised. Previous to 1917 self-feeders for hogs had been used on a small scale, but had proved unquestionably successful. The facts showed that farmers with self-feeders kept more hogs than they could otherwise. This suggested to the county agents that the self-feeder be made the basis of a campaign for better pork. Being "bees or demonstrations were held by agents, at which self-feeders were constructed with the help of the farmers attending the meetings, and instructions given for their proper use. The emphasis being placed upon their advantage in connection with pasturing hogs. As a result of the campaign, 745 additional self-feeders are now reported in use and 2,200 more hogs are being raised with them.

HAD ONE NIGHT'S GOOD SLEEP

Under the Circumstances, It Was Little Wonder Private Stevenson Was Late for Reveille.

It was almost dark when a company of doughboys entered a town that had just been evacuated by the retreating Germans. Private Stevenson began searching for a place where he might spend his last night of the war. Finding a room, he found a spring bed, white sheets, while wallowes and a fireplace. "Och-la-lai!" he said, and began taking off his shoes. A few minutes later a woman entered. She explained that a German count had occupied the room for a number of weeks, and said that at that very moment there was something up the bed a handful of fine linen and nightgowns the count might return for at any time. That night Private Stevenson slept in a soft woollen nightgown, and for many days afterwards he was doing his best to square matters with his first sergeant because of being late for reveille the following morning.
