Lime for the Garden

Too few home gardeners use enough lime. Lime is of particular value in the case of acid soils and heavy clays, but should be applied to almost all gardens, 15 to 30 pounds of ground limestone or air-slaked lime to the square rod of soil. Lime furnishes no food to the plants, but sweetens and lightens the soil and by chemical action makes some foods already in the soil available to the plants.

In our statement regarding the paving of Grand River last week we were misinformed as to the width of the pavement, from the Wayne county line to the Junction, and from the cemetery to Hatton's corners. It should have been 18 feet, instead of 16. There will be nothing less than 18 feet.

Are Farm Buildings an Investment or an Expense?

THE character of a farmer's buildings depends largely on whether he looks at building as an expense or an investment. It comes down to this. Do good farm buildings earn more money than they cost?

If carefully designed, well-built buildings make more money than they cost; every farmer will see the wisdom of having good buildings.

Here are a few facts for your consideration.

A good hog-house will pay for itself out of the feed it saves in one winter, and will then go right on paying dividends by making possible two litters of pigs each year, and bigger litters and healthier pigs.

A good implement shed will double the life of machinery, and save in the upkeep and repairs.

A good poultry-house makes chickens profitable on the average farm.

A good barn increases milk and beef production so that the additional profits pay for it in a few years.

If cattle are fed in the open, the saving in feed will pay for a cattle shed in one winter.

These are not theories. They are facts based on the experience of every-day farmers. They answer conclusively that good farm buildings are an investment.

We are prepared to furnish you with practical working plans, specifications, and bill of material for any type of farm building, free upon request, together with our estimate of the cost.

And we have a nice assortment of White Pine, the best and most economical wood for use on the outside of any farm building.
