Millions of people—in fact about 5 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion, acute or chronic. A French farmer had 36 children—22 sons and 14 daughters—all of whom were living when the war broke out. The father and one daughter were shot by Germans because they went to attend a party in honor of a relative's one-hundredth birthday; a second daughter was killed by a German shell at Dunkler; three sons were discharged from the army with grave injuries and thirteen were killed in action. The size of the family does not make its terrible sacrifice any less tragic.—Youth's Companion.

Economy Corner

Now the ostrich feathers have returned to favor the way that has been cured for her plumes will bring them out to find them increased in money value and available in a number of ways. Fashion approval of ostrich plumes in many forms and plumes are noted not alone in military but as decorations for evening dresses and for making the handsome fans. The plumes form innumerable fancy feather millinery ornaments, neckpieces, sashes and fringes and are fashionable in both the curled and uncurled state. Handsome wreaths for hats are shown with the feathers along one side of the rib curled and along the other straight.

If plumes that have been laid away are in good condition but soiled it is not a difficult matter to clean them, except that the curling process is a little tedious. They may be washed in a lukewarm suds of soft water and castile soap. They are shaken in the suds and drawn through the hand to squeeze out the soiled water. After they are clean they should be rinsed in warm, clear water and wrapped in cheesecloth or other absorbent material and put through an ordinary clothes wringer. But the rolls of the wringer must not be close enough to damage the feathers.

After this washing process they should be shaken until dry. Holding the feather by the rib it is shaken and gently beaten against the other hand. If the little flues cling together this may be corrected by holding them over the spout of a steaming kettle. When the plume is thoroughly dry it is ready for curling.

An ordinary table knife will answer for curling a plume. The plume is drawn along the edge of the knife between it and the thumb. The trick is to curl the flues only at the end and not too tightly. Each flue is to be curled to correspond with the others.

A faded plume may be tinted or a white plume given a color by dipping them in gasoline into which a little oil paint, such as comes in small tubes, has been dissolved. One has to experiment to get the tint wanted. Gasoline will not affect the curl of a feather. This tinting should be done by an open window in a room that has no fire of any kind in it, or in the open air.

It takes a professional feather manufacturer to make fancy feather ornaments, wreaths and pompons of the flues. There are many new ways of using ostrich flues on the new millinery for fall and winter and the possessor of plumes will not look far before finding a use for them.

Top Coats Are Full and Soft

Already coats for winter, both in cloth and fur, have passed and are finally passing in review before us. The cloth and fur coats are well established in the styles. Certainly no winter wear was ever heralded by more comfortable or more becoming garments. They are fuller than last year's models and the same materials that were so successful then are used to make them. Downy, velvours and similar cloths appear in lighter weights than last year so that top coats and suits may be full and draped without being cumbersome. This completeness of cloth makes the top coat easy to slip on and add to its warmth, and there is room under it for pants and other arrangements of apparel for wide hip effects. These five facts will establish in the styles and must be reckoned with. Heavy hemstays are used in some of the handsome and practical new models.

Collars are either of fur or of cloth in the coat. They are very cozy looking in either case. The fur collars are wide and fit snugly, coming up about the forehead chin and very high at the back. The cloth collars are managed so as to give the same effect of coziness with the face snugly down to them; very often they button across at the front and become a small cape when unbuttoned.

The coat shown in the picture is a good example of the new styles in substantial and practical top coats. It is of heavy cloth and therefore not as full as dressier models. Its narrow belt of the cloth fastens at one side. The very cold and long cuffs are finished with a single large button.

Female Frigidities. Velvet figures, cut with raw edges and not applied on edges and evening coats of heavy silk jersey, are an effective trimmings. Sometimes they are edged with silk floss, sometimes with jet or colored beads.

For the woman who enjoys sport suggest great enveloping skirts of the softest Shetland wool wares on the diagonal and made in the most fashionable misty colors. In a few of the smartest shops and appear to be finding favor when worn straight around the neck, with the wide soft ends tucked under the belt in front.

No More Worries Over Excessive Coal Bills

It is not generally known that even the small coal consumer can have his coal shipped direct from the mines, thus saving the profits that otherwise would go to wholesaler and retail dealer, besides saving hauling expense. Of course, big manufacturers and other large consumers have always bought this way, but the man who buys only enough for his household is now in position to take advantage of the same purchasing privilege. The well-known BERNTZ COAL CO., 222 South Dearborn St., Chicago, is doing an enormous business in supplying small consumers—as well as the big ones—with all grades of hard and soft coal at mine prices.

That the consumers are highly pleased is evidenced by the fact that they are receiving and trying the coal. The following are extracts from such letters: "I have found your coal excellent and your dealings courteous and fair. I shall continue to buy my coal from you."—Ed. G. Gerber, Burlington, Ia. "More than pleased with it. Please quote me prices on same coal for December."—Arthur Churchman, Alexandria, Ind. "Well pleased with it. Expect to buy more from you."—E. H. Brown, Tompkins, Mich. "Coal arrived on time; has given entire satisfaction; am exceedingly pleased. Wish to thank you for your courteous treatment in our dealings."—M. B. Ford, Franklin, Ky. Adv.

Walk for Pleasure. The oldest and most pleasant Sunday afternoon through the countryside, has practically disappeared. This is the inevitable conclusion drawn by anyone who still pursues this ancient pastime and who has spent Sunday after Sunday drilling by foot over macadam and dirt roads frequented by automobilists and an occasional farm hand traveling to a neighbor's. Walking for the sake of the walk has nearly passed out, along with the one-horse rig, the glass-paneled artificial flowers in the parlor and hair-covered furniture. It had its day before the bicycle and the automobile and with the advent of these quicker, easier means of transportation it dropped from the human scheme of things with a dull thud.—Ocala News.

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says: "I suffered from female troubles which, and excruciating pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

How Mrs. Boyd Avoided an Operation. Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well."
"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted, with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St. N. E., Canton, Ohio.
