Use The Home Paper
The farmer or village citizen who neglects to use the village paper to his or her advantage is, so to speak, working against heir own interests. The village paper should be a channel for the farmers to be on speaking terms, and only with their immediate neighbors, but with the farmers of the surrounding townships, where topid of live interest should be discussed, and the villager to air his grievenees before election as well as to elluctidate on the advantage of this or that proposition. To make it a mere channel for the comings and goings of the people without taking the weightier matters into consideration is nothing less than a self-inflicted wrong. Yes we say again, use your village paper, and don't abuse it by sheer neglect.—Oxford Leader.
