A Look At A Session Of U.S. Horticulturalists

The American Horticultural Society held its 24th annual Congress in Philadelphia last week with more than 400 garden enthusiasts (including The Observer Newspapers' Suburban Gardener) attending from all parts of the country.

There were representatives from all the mayor arboretums and botanical gardens, from garden clubs, borticultural societies, special plant societies, special plant societies, from magazines and periodicals devoted to horticulture, and many plain home gardeners. devoted to horticulture, and many plain home gardeners. Almost all of the states were represented, including Hawaii and there were gardeners from several foreign countries, in-cluding the Soviet Union.

MINI-DECK eliminates dangerous step down from doorsill to patio by leveling walking surface between outdoors and interior floor. Deck is built entirely of Douglas fir 2x4s, with joists laid di-rectly on patio paying Bench by door makes stop-off for trays of refreshments.

SEVERAL DAYS were devoted to lectures, films and reports from celentists and experts. Other cays were set aside for tours of treat Philadelphia, submitten gardens, and estates and arboretumes in the area.

A panel of experts discussed the damage to plants from politiced city air and explained the research being done to select and breed resistant plants. Both exhaust fumes and facious of the edges of leaves and silverers enough, the plants must be select and prevent air pollution.

New methods of propagating plants from cuttings were explained, including ways for the home gardener to root cuttings.
