Statement: Make it yours

This is the year to break rules and to wear your own signature. It is time to create your own personal fashion look.

If everyone leaves their ties untied -- tie yours -- either together or by tying each end onto itself.

If everyone wears stick pins, switch to brooches or scatter pins -- use your stud earrings.

If everyone wears scarves or narrow string ties -- try a bow tie.

If everyone wears their hair long and fluffy -- wear yours sleekly back or have it cut short in the urchin look.

If everyone hides freckles under a cover-up make-up -- let yours show through a sheer skin screen.

If everyone wears gold and diamonds -- wear sea shells on a silk cord or wear silver.

If everyone wears lace and prints -- wear natural linen or cotton with rope.

If everyone wears one skirts -- wear two -- a longer gauzy skirt under last year's shorter peasant skirt.

If everyone wears a neat and tidy blazer -- unbutton yours, push the sleeves up and over the elbow and turn up the collar.

If everyone wears a shirt under their vest -- wear a T-shirt under yours.

If everyone coordinates their colors -- uncoordinate yours and wear three totally unrelated colors.

If everyone wears panty hose -- wear them, too -- for business, but otherwise try a pair of ankle socks with the new flat "pancake" sandal.

Bill Kaiserman for Rafael makes a slinky soft print statement in three pieces. You make the statement by draping the shawl accordingly.
