

Formalwear goes out to play for spring as a more casual approach to off-hours dressing is adopted. Designer Robert Stock interprets this attitude towards sportswear by creating all-cotton wing and bib-front sportshirts, which are appropriately worn with jeans or cotton oxford suspender slacks.

All-American sportswear classics are back for spring, but updated for a new generation of quality conscious males. Madras, as in the '50s bleeding variety, is reworked for the '70s and able to maintain the original full-bodied look full-time, no bleeding.

the undarted ivy which is truly soft and comfortable in construction. Shoulders are natural; lapels are a fraction narrower or have a slightly fuller roll.

The below-the-waist story for spring is trousers which are either slightly flared or straight. The straighter leg strongly suggests a return to the cuffed bottom, and those being shown are about 1 1/4-inch wide.
