

Clown's faces

A clown is funny, to be sure, but a clown can be a lot of other things, as well. He, or she—for a clown can be a woman, too—heightens our awareness of ourselves. As we laugh, we see the warm but often sad elements that make up a human being. Three kinds of clowns are illustrated by members of the Mime Ensemble, who will teach a course in Clown Characterization beginning April 22 at Oakland University, Rochester. Tom Aston is the tramp clown (above); Kim Rust, the circus clown (top right); and Daniel O'Connor, the tragic clown. Clown Characterization will examine visual aspects of costumes and make-up and performance styles of the three characterizations. For course details, call the Division of Continuing Education at 377-3120. (Staff photos by Dick Kelley)
