Theft, recoveries down

re is some good news and some

The good news is auto thefts this year are showing a slight decline from 1976 figures.

The bad news is there is a reduction in the recovery rate of stolen cars, off-setting the theft rate improvement. According to FBI figures, acar is stolen every 33 seconds.

And the recovery rate has been dropping. The recovery rate is important because a high recovery rate indicates many cars were taken for invides.

indicates many cars were taken for joy rides.

Since the recovery rate is dropping, officials are alarmed because this indicates that these cars are being stolen by experienced car thieves who know what they're doing.

inow what they're doing.
In 1976, one million cars were stolen
Of those, only 69 per cent were recovered. In 1985, the recovery rate was 90 per cent. The average value of the unrecovered vehicles is $2,000.
Many of the stolen cars are sold outright. Others are stripped and sold as parts. There are indications that organized crime has found car thievery profitable and has gotten into the act.
To prevent your car from being stolen, the National Automobile Theft Bureau recommends protecting your arr the same as you protect your
arr the same as you protect your

car the same as you protect you

• Lock your car, whether it's in your driveway or far away from home. If you have a garage, lock it in your garage and then lock the garage.
• If you leave your car in a parking lot, don't leave the keys, Park the car warrself and take your keys with you.

yourself and take your keys with you. It's too easy to have a key copied.

Never leave anything of value—CB radio, clothing, camera or packages—in plainview in your car. It's an open ivitation to the car thief.

If you must use apont—

open ivitation to the car thief.

• If you must use apartment complex lots or large shopping center lots where many people come and go at all hours, invest in an antitheft device to deter the thief or at least slow him down.
