

Paper takes new forms

"Innovations in Paper," a national art competition organized by the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, drew entries from all across the country. It will remain in the gallery, 1516 S. Crankbrook, through May 5. (At left) Pamela Freund of Farmington Hills won a juror's award for her entry, "Rethinking the Teepee." Her entry is of wax and handmade paper with a three-dimensional aspect to the parchment-like covering for the teepee. (Below) Christine Campbell of East Lansing won a juror's choice award for her subtly colored herringbone inspired wall hanging. Kathryn McCordie Lipke and Ted Ramsay were the judges who chose the artists who won about $1,000 in cash and art supplies. (Staff photos by Dick Kelley)

Schools to teach Holocaust lessons

By CARL STODDARD

"The Holocaust," broadcast by NBC, was for many Americans a first close look at the horrors of human extermination practiced by the Nazis. The program provoked a number of reactions, including urgings by most Jewish groups for public school classes on the Holocaust.

The Southfield Board of Education passed a resolution last month endorsing Holocaust-related classes. Beginning next fall school officials will offer a program to help teachers learn what materials are available and how to best teach about that dark period of the 20th century.

"We're not going to teach 'Rise and Fall of the Third Reich' or show the entire 'Holocaust' every time the subject is brought up," said William Krizmir, associate superintendent of instruction for Southfield Public Schools.

Intent of the program will be to provide "a continuing awareness and sensitivity" of the lessons learned by the Holocaust, he said.

"THERE WILL not be a course called 'The Holocaust.' But we will continue to deal with the Holocaust through various course offerings," Krizmir said during an interview last week.

To insure that the subject is taught fully, material relating to the Holocaust will be compiled and made available this school year to high school social science teachers.

In addition, school officials will take a look at existing courses such as political science and history where Holocaust information can be added or increased.

Next fall, a program will be developed for teachers to give them specific information on what and how to teach the subject. The program will include a look at what resources are available and how to use those resources, Krizmir said.

While integrating lessons on genocide into the regular school curriculum may be less than some had hoped for, Krizmir sees it as a definite step in the right direction. In the past history lessons in most schools never mentioned the Holocaust, he said.

"I never heard about it in 16 years of school," he said. "It was never touched on."

Krizmir said the showing of "The Holocaust" has not resulted in a cry among residents for Holocaust-related classes. Many residents in Southfield, he said, are already aware of the meaning of the Holocaust, and have acknowledged the school board's willingness to maintain and heighten that awareness.

THE DEMAND for Holocaust classes has been diminished by the fact that some high school classes presently deal with the subject, he said.

Nationally, sociologists and educators maintain that educating Americans about the Holocaust is the only way to prevent future atrocities.

Southfield presents one-acts this Friday

By BRAD MENDELSON
Southfield High Correspondent

At 8 p.m. Friday, May 5, Southfield High School's drama direction class will present two one-act plays, "The Magic Shop" and "The Puppet Master."

"The Magic Shop," directed by Ann Durbin, is the story of a little girl, Amy, and her trip to a magic shop on her eighth birthday. "The Magic Shop" stars Abby Brown as Amy, Jon Ackman as her brother William, Karen Ruby as Margaret, Amy's mother, and Michael Fox as Mr. Briggs, the proprietor of the magic shop.

"The Puppet Master," directed by Renee Latlood, is the story of two puppets in love. "The Puppet Master" stars Marcie Wallas as the girl puppet, Jeff Weiss as the boy puppet and Mitch Cohn as the narrator.

The faculty sponsor for the plays is

Mrs. Virginia Borts, Committee and crew chairpeople for the evening of entertainment include Robin Reynolds, Rosie Abdo, Lisa Gladstone, Brad Mendelson, James Glossman, Randy Beard, Mike Levin, Cathy Kuhn and Mike Kaufman.

Both shows are intended for children and adults and will be presented cabaret style in Southfield High School's House "B" cafeteria. Refreshments will be served. Tickets may be purchased at the door for a donation of $1.

Future drama direction projects include "The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigold" and "The Me Nobody knows" on May 12. "The Red Peppers and 'Tigers'" one May 17. "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" on May 31, and the annual Southfield High School Thespian sponsored "Variety Show on June 2.

For further information about any of the shows, call the school between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. weekdays at 354-7193.

SOMETHING NEW FROM VISTA VIEW!

THIS CODE SPELLS TROUBLE FOR AUTO THIEVES.

The code is Identifier and auto thieves don't like it because it's a simple but effective auto theft deterrent system. Once you're registered, computerized code is engraved in all the windows of your car, thieves are forced to replace all those windows before they can steal your car. This costs between $600 and $1000. That's a lot of trouble for crooks. For the low cost of Identifier it's worth your trouble to make auto thieves pick another car.
