

Coch to coach

Detroit Pistons Coach Dick Vitale discusses strategy with Meadow Brook Theatre actor Joseph Warren, who plays the role of a former basketball coach in the triple-award-winning comedy-drama "That Championship Season." The play tells the story of the 20th reunion of four members of a championship basketball team and their coach. "That Championship Season" runs through Sunday, Dec. 3, at Meadow Brook Theatre at Oakland University in Rochester.

Greek dancers appear

The Parthenon Dancers of Greece, over 40 in number, will perform regional and national folk dances and popular songs of their homeland in the Detroit Institute of Arts auditorium at 8 tonight. The concert will be approximately two hours long.

Included in the evening's presentation will be the folklore of Macedonia, Epirus, Pontus, Corfu, Thrace and the new nation of Greece, Roumelit and Moreas—all in authentic costume of the various regions.

Comprising the program will be the familiar Zorba's dance; a typical bridal celebration complete with wedding party; the multiple high kicks of the mountain people; the athletic leaps of island fishermen; the Drepania, performed with pointed harvest knives, and many others.

Accompaniment will be provided by five singers and 11 musicians, who will be on stage throughout the performance playing instruments of the type used since before the reign of Alexander the Great.

FOUNDED IN 1956, the group has devoted its offstage time to research, reconstruction and maintenance of traditional dance.

For ticket information and reservations, call the Detroit Institute of Arts ticket office, 832-2730.

Tatum plays jazz concert

Detroit jazz pianist James Tatum will perform at 8 p.m. tonight in the University of Michigan-Dearborn's Fair Lane Conference Center.

Tatum is a keyboard artist in the jazz field who is also a composer, music director, educator and lecturer. He holds his master's degree from the University of Michigan.

Included in the program Monday evening will be one of Tatum's own compositions, "Spiritual Jazz Suite," a musical which traces jazz to its African origins. His other compositions include "Proud Heritage," "Hal-lelujah," "Contemporary Jazz Mass" and "The Great Detroit Renaissance." Tatum is a co-director of the St. Aloysius Cultural Center, head of the fine arts department at Murray Wright High School, and director of the James Tatum Trio Plus. He makes appearances at colleges and universities throughout the United States.

The free concert is sponsored by the U-M-D Cultural Events Committee. Anne Parks, associate professor of music history is director of the music series. For further information call 593-5536.
