JNF women work for Israel

By SHIRLEE IDEN

Once poet Joyce Kilmer waxed eloquent when he said there are no poems as lovely as trees.

Most members of the Women of the Jewish National Fund would agree that trees are lovely, but for Israel trees are more than that.

"They are planted to hold down the soil so that farmers can plant and earn a livelihood, they are put where nothing else will grow, and they are used as shelter belts from the hot winds," said Belle Levin, longtime Women of JNF leader in a Southfield interview.

Mrs. Levin explained that JNF means trees to most people, but the organization is the official land reclamation and reforestation agency of Israel.

"We build roads and engineer drainage. Many buildings such as the Hadassah Hospital and the Hebrew University are built on JNF land," she said.

Several hundred members and friends of Women of JNF will gather on Tuesday, Jan. 9 for the group's 49th annual donor tea at noon at Congregation Shalom Zede.

Among them will be women who have raised JNF funds for more than 50 years.

"The tea is simply a culmination of great effort by many women," said Reba Bloom of Southfield, president of the group. "Much of the fundraising will have been done prior to the tea."

IN THE coming year, the local JNF group has pinpointed their 1979 project by "adopting" a settlement in the Galilee, the northern region of Israel near the Lebanese border.

Mrs. Bloom said the women have a three year plan to raise $250,000 for their project, a settlement called Moshav Dishon.

Shirley Kraft, fundraising chairperson, said the government of Israel has asked JNF to concentrate on the Galilee at this time.

"This is the new peace salient," the Southfield resident said. "It is more vital now than ever, since the Galilee is under-populated and underdeveloped."

Moshav Dishon was established in 1953, but development has lagged, the women said.

"The original settlers came from North Africa and Salonika, Greece, and now the second generation finds few opportunities in the area for jobs, education and social outlets."

Mrs. Levin said the JNF goal is to improve the quality of life in the settlement while the government broadens the economic base by establishing industrial plants and aids in increasing agricultural yields.

"What we want is to encourage young people to stay in the area," Mrs. Levin said. "Only 32 per cent of the populace in the Galilee is Jewish presently."

Mrs. Levin said when JNF adopts a specific project such as Moshav Dishon, the members seems to identify better with their goals and to comprehend the human equation involved.

Trees mean the greening of the land in Israel, the redemption of the desert and wilderness. Women of JNF are involved in tree planting and other projects which make an improvement in the quality of life and keep young people interested in settling in areas like the Galilee.

LOCALLY, WOMEN of JNF have been associated with projects for Israel for 38 years now. Altogether, some 135,000,000 trees have been planted in the land reclamation effort.

Mrs. Bloom, who calls herself "an immigrant from Philadelphia" has worked in the JNF auxiliary here for 27 years.

"I've done just about every job imaginable," she said. "So now I have been promoted to president."

Thirty years ago, Mrs. Levin was recruited into her first Zionist association by Anna Slomovitz, wife of the Southfield publisher of the Jewish News.

"She came here as a bride and organized a chapter of Young Judea and I became a member," Mrs. Levin said. "I've been involved ever since."

Both women have visited Israel and hope to return there.

When they do, they will have a number of JNF projects to visit, and hopefully, one will be Moshav Dishon.

"We hope to build picnic areas and camp grounds in the Galilee in addition to the roads and homes that are necessary," Mrs. Bloom said.

An avid spokesperson for JNF accomplishments, Mrs. Levin stressed that JNF has changed the geography of Israel.

"The Galilee is all mountains, and without the approach roads we have built, settlements would have been impossible and also the military movement that has been so vital," she said.

"JNF HAS the equipment to do the necessary building. We have cut through mountains to build approach roads and literally have sliced off the tops of mountains too."

Rabbi William Berkowitz of New York, president of the Jewish National Fund of America will be the guest speaker on Jan. 9. Entertainment will be provided by Ezra, a leading Israeli personality.

Mrs. Slomovitz is the program chairperson. Her co-chairpersons include Mrs. Levin and Beatrice Feigelman, Belle Greenbaum and Faye Mancer of Southfield, Betty Silverman of Farmington Hills and Resa Winkelman of West Bloomfield.

Special Gifts Committee members include Fannie Cooper, Pearl Nosen, Libbie Fosen, Edith Kolodney and Belle Hodes of Southfield and Helen Rosenfeld of Oak Park.
