Melodrama, Victorian-style

Judy Uridge (at left) and Sharian Douglas are two of the Farmington Players "Caught in the Villain's Web." The melodrama continues in the Players Barn Friday and Saturday, Aug. 3-4, combined with an open house to give players a look at the Players' 77 years on stage. Founders' Festival parade attendees got a preview of the show when the players donned their costumes and set up a mock stage on a float. Tickets are available through the players' box office, 477-1066.

Four are off to Blue Lake

Four area youths are spending some of their summer in Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp this month which offers a wide variety of study in the fine arts. Angela Fritzsche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guenther, and Marguerite D. Tom, daughter of Salome Tom, will both major in orchestra. They are from Farmington Hills. Anne M. Keeber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Keeber of Farmington Hills, will major in art. Jane Neuhauser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neuhauser of Farmington, will major in band. Blue Lake, located 15 miles north of Muskegon in the Manistee National Forest, is one of the largest facilities of its type in the U.S. Before the summer is finished, the camp will have hosted about 3,200 elementary-through-high-school students.

Down to earth

Reflecting pool adds dimension

There has been some complaint about the bitterness of lettuce in this cycle of the summer.

For lettuce to taste prime it must have rapid growth. If you plant your seed early and KEEP THE SOIL

MOIST you will have good results. It is the hot, dry vegetable beds which aren't conducive to good lettuce. Lettuce likes fertilizer, too. So these are the good guidelines for a good stand of lettuce. Plan on starting some more seed after the hot part of August — and don't forget the fertilizer.

Aside from maintenance, this season in the garden seems to run on a regular routine. Have you ever thought of having a garden pool for an accent? They are a joy to possess. Experience showed me that the raccoons liked the fish and also they liked to rinse their food in the pool (just like a neat housewife). You can live through the raccoon raids if you leave an aisle to the pool, if you have some flowering plants for accent on the rim. Of course, soon you will be without goldfish.

To assure that your pool won't crack in winter, you should have sloping sides. You would want it to be 24 inches to 30 inches deep. Around the edges I have seen ledgerrock placed, not evenly, but a few that extend over the ledge. Be sure and have the placement where you can enjoy it from a window.

You can buy a motorized fountain which can be turned on for special occasions. Lighting is something you mention tongue in cheek, due to present emphasis on energy conservation.

Water lilies are a real joy, especially the tropical ones if you have a sunny location. The ornamental pool really makes a garden special. If you know someone who loves making things, you have it made. As for the hardy lilies — you can remove them, trim off the excess leaves and stems and bury in the ground about 24 inches. I would place large flat stones over the "burial" to discourage rodents. The tropical lilies can be stored like you would dahlia bulbs.

A wise suggestion is to place a log or two in your ornamental pool to control the expansion of ice in the winter. From experience I know that owning an ornamental pool is a constant joy as a novelty, a showcase for potted plants and a tranquil decoration for a lovely garden.

From research done at the University of Rhode Island, it has been found that if you allow grass and weeds to grow in a shrub bed they inhibit the growth of your choice plants. Mulched beds were less satisfactory than cleanly cultivated surfaces of soil. Frequent fertilizing should be done on the grass near shrubs due to the eager appetites of shrub roots.

Many of you will be vacationing in the northwestern region of Michigan. If near Lake Michigan no doubt you will have shore walks to hunt for Petokey stones. These stones were once one of the lowest forms of animal life on earth. They are the remains of living coral which grew in the warm salt seas which covered Michigan 350 million years ago. The Petokey stone is the official stone of our state.

Beautification committee on lookout for awardees

The City of Farmington Beautification Committee is on the countdown now, working towards its 11th annual awards luncheon in October.

That's when the city will honor businesses, industries and churches which have maintained their properties throughout the year.

The whole of July has been taken up by some members of the committee driving or walking through the city to its boundaries, noting properties that have consistently been kept clean, picked up and otherwise maintained. Also noted were properties under the process of renovation or improvement.

During August, the awards committee, headed by Mrs. Noel Kurth, will re-judge recommended properties throughout the city.

Plaque winners and honorable mentions will be contacted by invitation in early October for attendance at the honors luncheon.

THE BEAUTIFICATION committee is a volunteer organization appointed by City Council, made up of those who take pride in helping to maintain beautification throughout the city.

Sales of Farmington Beautiful T-shirts, seen in great numbers in the city lately, has aided the group in several plantings of new garden areas.

The committee's motto is "Beauty is Progress" which Founders' Festival parade goers saw spelled across a garden float with white garden arbor, in an effort to constantly remind residents to keep Farmington beautiful.

Anniversary is celebrated

Diane Khami Mansoor and Nashat Mansoor (Daboul) celebrated their first anniversary this month. The couple wed July 23, 1978, in Geus Parish, and now reside in Southfield.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Khami, of Farmington Hills and he is the son of Mrs. Mary Mansoor (Daboul) of Ferndale.

Mrs. Mansoor is a senior nursing student at Oakland University and he is a graduate of Wayne State University and holds a master's degree in chemical engineering.
