Lace yourself with elegance

This is the year when the only signature you will settle for will be your own. And in body language, that signature will be spelled soft, sexy and sophisticated.

Everything about you will reflect serene elegance. You will radiate an aura of self-confidence based on the knowledge that you are perfection. You have planned for it, worked for it, and now you need settle for nothing less than the best.

The concept even extends to the intimate moments when you withdraw from the hectic public world to your own private Shangri-La. Once you doff your tailored suit, spiked heels, and the obligatory complement of gloves, hats, and belts, rekindle the imagination by complimenting beautiful radiant skin with imported laces, luxe satins, and featherweight silks.

And where does one find the ultimate of luxe intimate apparel? One surprising source is that legendary atelier, Moseley's, since 1925 a landmark, first in the Fisher Building, and recently of Birmingham.

This linen shop has tantalized generations with the best and most elegant fabrics and laces from every part of the world — fine Irish linens, Alencon laces from France, Swiss woven cottons, and Belgian laces to embellish bed linens.

Now, in addition to decorative linens and laces, Moseley's will dress up the lady of taste with one-of-a-kind nightgowns, lace appliqued pigniors, and lingerie, each piece guaranteed to meet Moseley's exacting demands for perfection.

The collection has been put together by Corhan Nonmair, a French designer noted for elegance and contemporary styling, and Flo Weinberg, whose collection includes quilted robes and nighttime cuddlers.

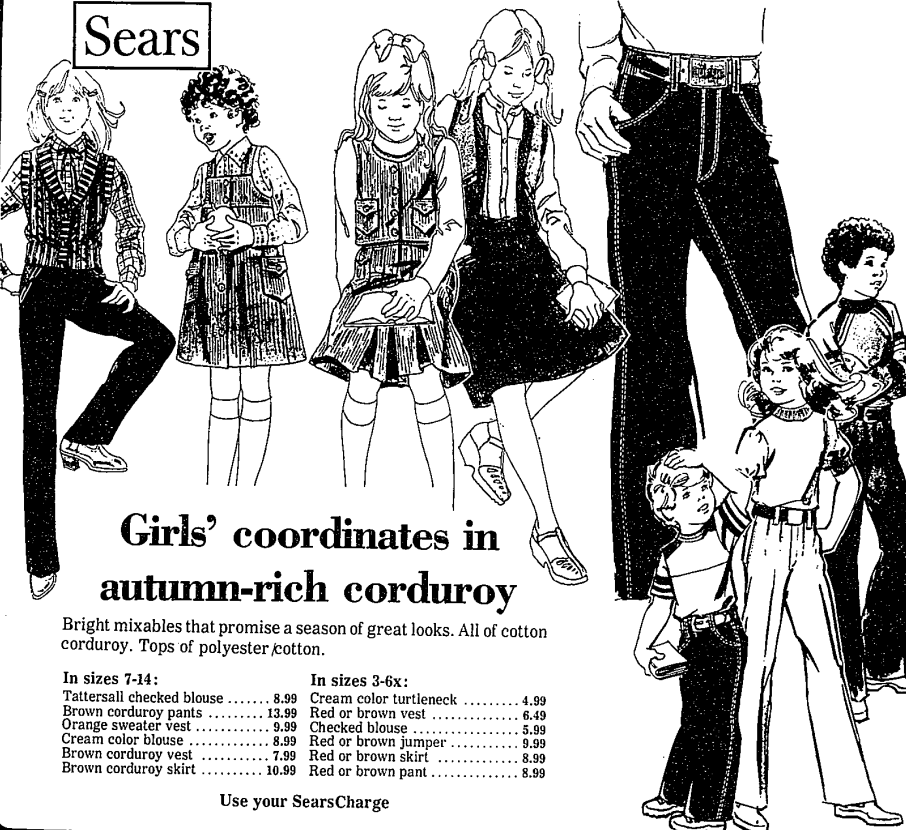

Feminine is French and French is Nonmair's confection of silken blue satin remarque pigniors and matching gowns.

Practical is American, but so is romantic, especially when Flo Weinberg pairs the two in quilted robes embellished with ecru Alencon lace at the collar and sleeves.

Moseley's Douglas Vernier promises a gallery of intimate looks for the fall season ahead. Multi-colored embroidered flowers set against pale blue backgrounds, to the deeper shades of fashions, will be as delectable as the store's legendary collection of decorative linens.

All of which, you can be assured, will make an already irresistible shop that much more tantalizing.
