

AMC offering 4WD car

American Motors Corporation today introduced its new 1980 Eagle four-wheel-drive automobile.

The car is a new concept in the automotive field, AMC officials say. It offers the convenience of a compact car with the traction and handling characteristics of a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

The car is available in two-door and four-door sedan, and four-door wagon versions.

Outside, the Eagle shares several body parts with the AMC Concord. But the Eagle sits three inches higher off the ground and uses 15-inch wheels and tires instead of 14 inch.

The chassis and drivetrain are where greater differences are found. The Eagle has automatic four-wheel drive. It offers independent front suspension and a new transfer case which uses liquid silicone and produces a more effective as well as quieter and smoother operation.

The Eagle is in the compact class, with a 109 3/4-inch wheelbase and measuring 166 1/2 inches in length.

It is equipped with the AMC 4.2 liter six-cylinder engine, three-speed automatic transmission, automatic four-wheel-drive system, power steering, power brakes and radial tires as standard.

Fuel consumption estimates are expected to reasonably approach the economy of a comparably equipped two-wheel-drive vehicle of similar size and weight, AMC said. AMC is headquartered in Southfield.

AMC's 1980 Eagle features four-wheel drive in both sedan and wagon versions.
