

Orchard Ridge graduates into fall as summer fades

Catching the sunlight while she can, Lisa Agabashian jots down a few opening day notes at Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge campus. (Staff photos by Randy Borst)

Strolling through campus, students adjust to their return to the scholarly life at OCC.

Already into the swing of things, Kathy McWilliams seems intent on her reading.

New semesters begin with a traffic jam at the OCC book store.

While others are content with a feather boa, Jill Ensign, an OCC lab assistant, settles for George, the boa constrictor. There is 7½ feet of George to wrap around Ms. Ensign's neck.

Anne Klein boosts your business pursuits with the suitlook that says you've arrived

Suiting at its most successful. With a refinement of line, a rich choice of fabrics that proves you're one who makes all the right decisions. Beginning with a shapely one-button blazer in navy wool flannel, $246. Adding a skirtful of pencil-thin pleats on navy wool crepe, $120. And then, the invaluable asset of a silk bow blouse in a subtle, harmonizing print, $190. Misses' sizes in The Woodward Shops at Northland, Eastland, Oakland, Fairlane, Twelve Oaks and Briarwood.
