Fish don't breathe, but they do have nostrils. Most fish have a very keen sense of smell.

In fact, it is not known whether fish can taste what they eat. They may choose their food entirely by the way it smells.

I take it back. One type of fish does breathe. You guessed it — the lung fish.

Master of fact, when the ponds dry up where they live, lungfish can breathe the air. Just the way humans do.

No matter what your air pollution, Neptune Aquarium has fully guaranteed air pumps, water pumps and the accessories you need for happy, healthy fish. Contact us today.
