Cancer patients invited to 'I Can Cope' classes

On Monday, Oct. 29, the American Cancer Society will introduce and eight-week rehabilitation course for cancer patients and their family members.

The two-hour classes will meet on eight consecutive Mondays through Dec. 17 in the society's metropolitan headquarters, 29500 Southfield Rd., Southfield.

There is no fee, but class size is limited and participants must register, and are expected to attend every session.

"I Can Cope," which began in Minnesota in 1977, is designed to help individuals affected by cancer to regain control over their lives by improving their understanding of how the disease affects them physically, emotionally and socially.

The course will be coordinated by Anne Allen, an American Cancer Society student volunteer, and Josephine Wharf, a registered nurse and supervisor for Upjohn Healthcare Services. The Upjohn Co. is providing additional funding assistance for the local "I Can Cope" program.

The weekly sessions will deal with the disease process and related health problems as well as helping the patient to live within the limitations set by cancer.

Information on community resources will be made available to the class. One speaker will be scheduled for each meeting: doctors, social service workers, the clergy, dieticians, an attorney, a psychologist and an occupational therapist.

Cancer patients or family members can register by calling the society at 557-5353.

WHAT'S THIS?

This is the Goss Metro Press. It prints your hometown newspaper twice each week. It's big! It stands 28 feet tall and weighs 150 tons. It holds 2,000 pound paper rolls that are about six and one half miles long.

Tours of the Observer & Eccentric Livonia Plant, where 12 hometown newspapers are printed twice each week, feature a visit to the pressroom where this mighty giant can be seen in operation.

They also include a visit to the newsroom, and a peek at the classified advertising phone room where want ads are typed on what looks very much like a small television screen.

To arrange for your group's free tour, call 591-2300. Tours last approximately one hour and are given on Mondays and Thursdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for groups up to 25.
