

Madonna Plans 4 Night Classes For Teachers

Madonna College is offering a series of late afternoon and evening classes this fall for in-service teachers and adult students on the Livonia campus and at the Detroit Institute of Technology.

A special series of on-campus contemporary courses designed especially for teachers but open to other students as well will include film as communication, Old Testament themes, Negro history and urban sociology.

Father John A. Lombardini will teach the evening film course which will consider the elements of film and the appraisal of film as art medium. In a late afternoon course, Old Testament themes, Father John J. Castellet, author and columnist, will trace representative themes in the biblical theology of the Old Testament.

Instructors for Negro history and urban sociology are Mrs. Alma Forrest Polk, former instructor at Fisk University, and Mrs. Mary Agnes Davis, Detroit social worker, respectively.

OTHER LATE afternoon and evening courses being offered on the Livonia campus are history of art, diagnosis and remedial reading, rhetoric and composition, world civilization, U.S. history in the 20th century.

Crowley's Has Back-To-School Fashion Show

Crowley's of Livonia Mall will again feature a back-to-school fashion caravan, which opens Saturday night, August 24, at 7 p.m.

Headlining the show will be a teen music group "The Fruit of the Loom," and Crowley's fashion coordinator, Emaline Halsstead.

The mobile unit will feature the new leather look, and the haberdashery look, plus put-togethers for the "collectors." Fashions for young men will also be displayed, as fellows will appear with models from Crowley's teen fashion boards.

tury, child care and guidance, magazine article writing, basic mathematics, linear algebra, calculus with analytic geometry, III, history of music, choral technique, philosophy of man, international relations, Spanish conversation, case studies, oral interpretation and speech correction for teachers.

Madonna College will also offer the following courses at the Detroit Institute of Technology: psychology of the adolescent, instructional media and foundations of education II. Registration for part-time students will take place at Madonna College, 35600 Schoolcraft on Tuesday, August 27
