

Jarred Rabin, 3, and his teacher Dingy Sharp joined teachers and tots in Fairview Early Childhood Center for a re-enactment of the first Thanksgiving. The event was part of the preschoolers' regular activities in the nursery for 3- 5-year-olds. The next term will begin the week of Jun. 7. Parents interested in registering their children may call Fairview at 626-8335. (Staff photo by Randy Borst)

Even Ebenezer Scrooge could find it difficult to ignore the holiday gifts from around the world now available in the Christmas Shop at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Robert Scott, museum shops manager, says this year's gift suggestions are as exciting as any previous holiday season.

ground to the bold black line themes. The motifs are distinctively Amazonian. Decorated fabrics are available too. There are also a variety of gift selections available. U.S. made one-of-a-kind glass paperweights are just one such example. They are unique in design and appearance.

Michigan craftsmen also contribute

"We look for unusual or one-of-a-kind gifts which offer a uniqueness and sense of good taste hard to find elsewhere," said Scott.

Some unique gifts being featured from Russian this year include hand-painted, limited-production lacquer boxes from the villages of Palekh, Mstera, Fedoskino and Khlovi. Each box is a signed original and three colors are original in inspiration — rich oranges, reds and yellows, brilliant blues and opulent golds, on backgrounds of black, white or cream. Some are also available in more fashionable gift selections.

Books on just about every topic in the arts are now on sale in the institute's gift shop. The recently published "Alex Katz," by Irving Sandler is a popular gift idea, especially since 20 of the book's were recently autographed by Katz.

Among all the holiday suggestions, we must also discuss a very special one — the gift of a painting. The Straw trays from Nigeria are also available. The round trays come in varied sizes and a multitude of intricate designs. They are excellent for wall decorations.

• Contemporary ceramics in sizes to fit your decorative needs are imported from Peru. The ceramic pieces have a white slip over terra cotta as a back-
